

Instrumentation Technicians needed for major construction projects

We are currently seeking applications from instrumentation technicians interested in short-term and long-term project work and shutdown work.

Our clients are currently tendering on a number of major construction projects due to commence from the fourth quarter of 2012 onwards in various locations throughout Australia.

Our job is to help our clients ensure they have qualified people ready for short notice starts for these upcoming projects.

There is a current need for trade-qualified instrumentation technicians who have:

- Current Site Inductions
- A strong commitment and attitude towards safety
- Dual Trade qualifications
- Heavy Industrial Construction experience
- An Electrical Licence or TRA
- Hazardous Area Certification
- EWP
- HV Certification
- The ability to pass a full medical and drug/alcohol screen
- A current Construction Card
- Confined Space

What we can offer you:

- Competitive construction rates and allowances
- Suitable rosters
- The ability to be part of major resource projects
- A safe working environment

To register your expression of interest:

- Go to www.industrialtrades.com.au
- Go to the Job Seekers section
- Click the Here button in the Job Seekers Register Now box (top right of screen)
- Complete the Job Seeker Registration form

We will contact successful registered candidates directly to discuss opportunities as projects are awarded.
